

Ron's Rules for Good Writing

Rule #1: Avoid the Word it

- it is vague.
- Vague writing is bad writing.
- Both the writer and the reader are confused by vagueness.
- Usually it stands for some noun. Use the noun; avoid it.
- Examples

Bad: We hold it to be self-evident...

Good: We hold these truths to be self-evident...

Rule #2: Avoid Dangling Articles

- The words this and these are dangling articles.
- Like the word it, dangling articles are vague.
- Always include the noun that the article modifies.
- Examples

Bad: That to secure these, governments are instituted among Men.

Good: That to secure these rights, governments are instituted among Men.

Rule #3: Use Strong Verbs

- In English, verbs are the key words.
- Use strong verbs.
- Try to avoid: to be, to have, to get, to obtain.

Strong Verbs

create

build generate construct

derive demonstrate

prove

Weak Verbs

is, are

has, have

get, obtain

Rule #3: Use Strong Verbs (continued)

Examples

Weak: All men are equal.

Strong: All men are created equal.

Weak: That they obtain from their creator...

Strong: That they are endowed by their creator...

Rule #4: Use the Verb NOT the Noun

In English, many words have two forms: a verb form and a noun form. Often a noun can be generated from a verb by adding a suffix such as ion. For example:

Verbs

create

construct

derive

solve

Nouns

creation

construction

derivation

demonstration

solution

Verbs are the strong words in English. Whenever you have a choice between a verb and a noun, use the verb not the noun.

Rule #4: Use the Verb NOT the Noun (continued)

Examples

Weak: All men are equal by creation.

Strong: All men are created equal.

Weak: That they have an endowment from their creator...

Strong: That they are endowed by their creator...

Rule #5: One Idea Per Sentence

- Do not cram all your ideas into one sentence.
- Each sentence should contain one main idea.
- If you have two good ideas, use two sentences.
- Examples

Bad: Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof, and excessive bail shall not be required nor excessive fines imposed.

Good: Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof. Excessive bail shall not be required nor excessive fines imposed.

Rule #6: Write in the Present Tense

Examples

Bad: All men were created equal.

Good: All men are created equal.

Rule #7: Avoid Quotation Marks

- Never Never Never Never Never use quotation marks, unless you are quoting a person or a book.
- Putting quotation marks around a word does not alter the meaning of a word.
- Do not be lazy. Find an appropriate word or phrase to express your thoughts.

Rule #8: Good Writing is Mostly Rewriting

- Do not hand in your first draft.
- Proofread all your work, at least twice.
- Use a thesaurus.
 - Repeating the same word over and over again is boring.
- Use spell check.
- Correct all grammatical mistakes.

Bad grammar is difficult to read and understand. You appreciate reading a clearly written text; you dislike trying to understand vague, ambiguous, obscure, and incoherent writing. Do not inflict these impediments on your fellow students, teachers, or colleagues.

Rule #9: Organize Your Thoughts

- Write an outline.
- A collection of good ideas connected haphazardly is difficult to understand.
- Try to make your ideas flow together naturally.
